Priority

1. Applicant's substitute specification filed May 24, 2003 contains the text: "This is a continuation-in-part application of pending application Serial No. 08/329,546 ... Serial No. 08/026,415 filed March 4, 1993, now abandoned." Therefor the amendment filed 4/12/2002 inserting the continuity data is incorrect in that it repeats these two applications. And it is incorrect, as the continuity data needs to be updated. Applicant states "the continuity data has been amended to list the patent numbers for the applications that have matured into patents" but no such amendment can be found.

Specification

5. The substitute specification filed May 24, 2003 has been approved.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

- 6. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:
 - (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.
- 7. Claims 32-56 stand rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Wash (4,974,096) and European Patent Application 0 428 072 A2 ('072 hereafter).
- 8. Applicant has amended the claims to recite "a micro-computer for controlling the image transforming device, the film feed device, a processing circuit, and a magnetic recording device according to the detected hole, wherein the processing circuit transforms the picture data into one of bit-map data, GIF type data, TIFF type data, and JPEG type data, and the magnetic recording device records a size or aspect ratio of prints, a number of prints, and a size of paper selected by user." Applicant argues Wash "is silent about transforming the picture data into one of bit-type [sic] data, GIF type data, TIFF type data, and JPEG type data." The examiner cannot agree. Wash clearly discloses that the film is scanned by sensor 1006 generates a signal from which a video signal generator 1008 produces a still video signal, column 13, lines 25-46. And Wash states video signal processing circuits of the well-known type for altering the still video signal derived from that film frame so as to zoom, crop, rotate or fade the signal, column 5, lines 6-9.

- 9. While Wash does not specifically refer to the format of the "still video signal", it appears that the "still video signal" referred to by Wash is a standard format digital image signal which is operated on by the image processing circuitry of the video signal processor. The claimed image formats are the well-known standard digital image signal formats for storing and displaying a still video image signal. Further it is well known to perform image processing on images stored in these standard formats.
- 10. Even if the "still video signal" disclosed by Wash is not stored in the claimed format it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of applicant's invention to store the "still video signal" in the claimed format. One would have been motivated to so store the image signal in order to use a standard desktop computer and readily available image processing software to perform the video signal processing.

Conclusion

11. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. The Kim reference is cited for its disclosure "standardized technique for digital video compression, e.g., adopted by the Joint Photographic Experts Group (JPEG) with respect to still video signal coding."
